Insurgency, or progressive leader-

and that wing annexed to the colored's political domain.

By JOHN SNURE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—When Theodore Roosevelt reached New York at 10:15 this morning and headed for his home at Oyster Bay, having completed his trip of nearly three weeks through various States, east and west, men competent to judge of the import of his swing of 8,492 miles around the circle, were not slow to express the conviction that he had probably saved the Republican party from disruption.

It is, of course, too early to tell in all their ramifications the effects of his remarkable trip, with its astonishing series of demonstrations of popular favor for the former President and the man who is honored with the title of America's foremost private citizen. It will not be long until the reports of what he has accomplished, or not accomplished, what feelings he has aroused, what movements he has started or stopped or modified, begin pouring into Oyster Bay from the colonel's friends. Then it may be possible to discern the situation more clearly.

But just at present, with the trip just closed, there are many indications that Roosevelt has prevented the split in the Republican party from becoming an irreparable breach.

Lessened Democrats' Chances.
One thing the Roosevelt trip has undoubtedly achieved, and that is to lessen the chances of the Democrats carrying the House in the coming elections. High as are the hopes of the Democrats of carrying the House, and buoyant as are their pre-election forecasts, it is a serious question whether they can seize the House from the Republicans.

It is known that some of the men high in the councils of the Democratic party are not as hopeful as they were of victory in the Congressional elections. Chairman James T. Lloyd of the Democratic Congressional committee has lately received some discouraging advice.

The fact is that Theodore Roosevelt has suddenly loomed up as an obstacle of huge proportions in the way of Democratic success. He is such an obstacle because he has pointed the way to the progressive or insurgent wing of the Republican party how it is feasible to remain in the Republican party, instead of out of it.

AMOROUS LETTERS CAUSE DIVORCE SUIT

Wife of Thaw Relative Discovers Epistles Teeming With "Darlings."

NOTES OF TYPIST ARE FILED IN COURT

Refer to "Sharing of Joys and Sorrows of Past Two Years."

ST. LOUIS Mo., Sept. 11.—The efforts of a wife to smother her husband under a greater love and take back her husband, whom she alleges to have found corresponding with a pretty typist of St. Louis, his refusal to give up the other woman, and the wife's finding of a packet of amorous missives between the two, was told by Mrs. Belle S. Roseberry, who has filed suit for divorce from Frank U. Roseberry, Baltimore manager of the Underwood Typewriter Company, and a relative of the Thaws, of Pittsburgh.

The letters, which are alleged to have passed between the two and which are entered as evidence, teem with "darlings," "sweethearts," and breathe the warmest affection. They bewail the enforced separation, although the reminiscences of the "river trip" seem to have lightened the monotony of the separated existence.

Roseberry was formerly manager of the Underwood Typewriter Company, in St. Louis. His wife and he separated last June.

Sues for Maintenance.

Mrs. Roseberry sued her husband for maintenance in the St. Louis Circuit court last fall, and judgement by consent for $15 a month was entered. He settled the claim last Friday by giving his wife, according to her petition, indexed notes for $5,000. He came to St. Louis, his wife and he separated last June.

Her letter runs in part: "How can I address a woman who has in a premeditated manner planned to ruin my home and happiness? I suppose you are aware long before this that I have discovered your relations with my husband, and to say I blame you would be putting it mildly."

"It is nobler than true, pure womanhood? Can you really believe a man who would choose as his wife a woman who would permit certain liberties?"

"They may make a weak, passionate girl believe they do, but they seldom do. My first impulse upon learning your name was to go straight to your parents and explain thoroughly your conduct, but after due consideration I decided that I would write you instead. Should I ever hear anything further concerning your conduct, I have only to say you must suffer to the full extent of the law."

Extracts From Notes.

Extracts from some of the letters in her possession are:

"Truly I would give anything I possess to be with you forever, never to part. Well, darling, I hope you are feeling much better in every way. Elise is as forgotten when you are your own sweet self again. Be good, my loved one, and ever remember I am always thinking of you. With all my love, I am."

"Now listen, Dearie, I am still at the same hotel. Did I answer your question. Always believe me, Sweetheart, as yours in body, mind and spirit, and I love you more than life itself. Lovingly and lonesomely."

"Just think over the past two-and-one-half years. We have been closer than most married people, sharing each other's joys as well as sorrows, but the river trip to me is most lasting, how I enjoy being with you. Oh, God, if you were only with me now. Good night, Dearie, and may God bless and keep you in good health for me, your forlorn sweetheart."

Taylor R. Young, attorney for Mrs. Roseberry, stated that the divorce suit was not entered until every effort had been made to effect a reconciliation. He said the wife had been in her power to make up with her husband.

BACK-FIRE CAUSES BLAZE IN GARAGE

Oil Ignited and Three Cars Damaged by Flames.

Back fire from the muffler of an automobile owned by Walter G. Smith, and which had leaked to the floor of the garage of Raphael Simms, 628 Pennsylvania avenue, caused today, and the flames spread to other machines, threatening the establishment with destruction.

The quick action of employees, however, confined the damage to three automobiles.

Mr. Smith went to the garage this morning to repair his car. During the work oil leaked from the tank to the floor, and when the engine was started an imperfect explosion came from the muffler and the oil was set afire.

CHANLER TRUSTEES HOLD A CONFERENCE TO REGAIN FORTUNE

Determined Effort to Thwart Plans of French Singing Beauty.

ARTIST SEEKS QUIET AWAY FROM GOSSIP

Lawyers of International Fame Will Search French Laws for Points.

Romance of the Twentieth Century.

THE PRINCIPALS.
Robert Chanler, millionaire.
Lina Cavalieri, opera singer.

THE STORY.
Chanler proposed to the diva by cable, and was accepted by cable on April 15 last.

Chanler married Cavalieri June 18, settling, it is said, his $1,000,000 estate on her, and she agreeing to give him $20 a month and board and lodging.

THE RESULT.
Chanler returns to New York alone, and Cavalieri declares: "I REALLY DO NOT CARE much about him, but, after all, we are married, and I rather like the idea of being married."

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—That "Sheriff Bob" Chanler will be extricated in some manner from the financial morass into which he was drawn by the most-talked-of beauty in the world, Lina Cavalieri, who first married him, then sheared him of his fortune, and held him up to public ridicule, is generally believed in New York today.

While the artist-clubman has flown to some friendly harbor in the country, after threatening to assault a number of connections and legion of personal and matrimonial affairs, his powerful connection and legion of personal friends, will put up the hardest kind of a fight to rescue him from the position in which he has been placed.

Trustees in Conference.

The trustees of the Chanler securities and bonds which gave Robert Winthrop Chanler an income of $50,000 a year are needed to go through the mazes of keeping this fortune from finding a resting place in the hands of the opera singer, whose entanglements with Europeans of high rank have kept gossip mongers abroad entertained for years.

Just how Chanler is to be saved from the consequences of his follies none of the trustees will say. International lawyers are needed to go through the mazes of the French law, as it relates to patrimonies, dowries, and odd financial twists and turns.

No Attempt At Excuse.

It is believed here by Chanler's intimates that no attempt will be made to excuse his expensive infatuation by adopting methods similar to those which were used in the case of his eccentric brother, John Armstrong Chanler, who changed his name because his family had placed him in a sanitarium.

"Bob" Chanler, until he met Cavalieri, is conceded to have been as sane and healthy a specimen of a vigorous young American as could be found. His popularity and democracy and finer qualities are particularly impressed upon Dupont county, where he ran for sheriff and was easily elected.

It is said in Poughkeepsie that Chanler could win anything there in the political line that he wanted. His methods of campaigning were closely linked to those of genius.

Made Himself Popular.

When running for office he got close to the soil. He stopped at farm houses and in the morning borrowed the farmers' razors to shave with, asked the housewives for breakfasts, milked cows, helped do chores, and made himself immensely popular with a thousand clever tricks.

His Poughkeepsie outings for the populace reminded old politicians of the days on which "Big Tim" Sullivan and other Tammany chieftains entertained their constituents at College Point and other clam chowder resorts.

That Chanler's powerful friends will try to buy off Cavalieri and get her out of the family is a more logical and more possible mode of procedure in the opinion of shrewd observers.

They believe the cash will make the prima donna listen to reason, and the interviews she has been giving in Paris bear out this conclusion.

She has adopted the pose that there is no real trouble between herself and her eccentric young American husband, and that he will soon return to her.

Had Scores of Admirers.
It is not generally known how enormously rich is Cavalieri. Soon after graduation from the ranks of the flower girls and cafe chantant singers she began to accumulate powerful protectors, and the present favored admirer, (Continued on Third Page.)

THOUSANDS IN MONTREAL JOIN PROCESSION OF HOST

HIS EMINENCE THE CARDINAL BISHOP, Riding in Vehicle Loaned By Lord Strathcona, and Adorned With Splendor of Papal Court Usage.

SERVICES ARE HELD ON MOUNTAIN SIDE

Entire City Witnesses Greatest Church Pageant of American History.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Sept. 11.—Nature was glorious and man reverent today as the Eucharistic procession wended its way through three miles of streets in a lane of people numbering 300,000.

Independent of its religious aspect, it was the greatest pageant which has ever been seen on the continent. There were three cardinals, thirty archbishops, ninety bishops, and thousands of lesser clergy in their scarlet, blue, white, or brown robes, while the papal legate and the celebrants wore their cloth of gold garments made specially for the day.

The whole three miles of the route had been spread with a carpet of natural flowers, inches deep, and over this the Host was carried from the (Continued on Tenth Page.)

INSECT CALLS OUT FIRE DEPARTMENT

Infinitesimal Bug Causes District to Waste $120.

Harken to the harrowing tale of the depravity and the lack of consideration manifested by an infinitesimal bug.

Because of its incessant buzzing about the head of William H. Lambert, night clerk in the Eleventh street car barns, Engine Companies 1, 3 and 11, and Truck 4, at an expense to the District of about $120, made a run to the barns; half a hundred firemen were called from their beds at 3:14 o'clock, and all of the reserves of the Eight Precinct, under Lieutenant Judge were routed out.

Everybody knows how aggravating a little bug can be. It is the way Mr. Lambert explains the sounding of the alarm.

Incidentally the men of No. 21 Engine Company, who were called out yesterday morning to the home of R. C. Wilson, 1891 Lanier place, and expecting to find a conflagration worthy of their efforts, discovered that they were wanted to "put out" a burglar, are overjoyed.

The men of No. 21 were the butts of many jokes in the department yesterday and now, with victims to pick from three fire companies and a truck outfit, they're getting back.

Lambert was at peace with the world, but his feet upon his desk last night and scanned the night reports of the conductors. The car barn was peaceful, save for the occasional whirr of an "owl car," or the sporadic visits of late conductors and car crews.

Lambert was at peace with the world, but his feet upon his desk last night and scanned the night reports of the conductors. The car barn was peaceful, save for the occasional whirr of an "owl car," or the sporadic visits of late conductors and car crews.

The bug must die.
But the Providence which protects all blunders watched over the beetle, and while he was busy with his business, the oldest Swedish newspaper in the United States, is dead at his home here.

He was appointed minister to Denmark by President Harrison, but ill health forced him to decline the post.

DR. ENANDER DIES.
CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—Dr. J. A. Enander, founder of the Weekly Helander, the oldest Swedish newspaper in the United States, is dead at his home here.

FOURTEEN INJURED; CAR JUMPS TRACK

Ohio Interurban Passengers Are Hurlled Into Ditch on a Curve.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 11.—Fourteen persons were injured, four seriously, in a wreck of an interurban car early today on the Ohio electric system near here.

The car jumped the track on a curve while going about forty miles an hour, when the air brakes failed to work, and turned over in a ditch. That all escaped with their lives seemed miraculous.

The most seriously hurt are Mrs. Guy North, Bellevue, internally injured; Guy North, her husband, back injured; Mrs. George North, hip injured, and T. J. Myers, Polk, back and head injured.

LOAN SHARKS DRIVEN FROM WILMINGTON

Delaware Money Lenders' Plea for Mercy After Being Indicted, Heeded by Officials.

WILMINGTON, Del., Sept. 11.—The people of this city have won a victory against the "loan sharks."

The "Shylocks" are pleading for mercy, agreeing to leave the State if the indictments against them for exacting an illegal rate of interest upon cash loans are abandoned.

Arthur L. Wickenhiser, manager of the Wilmington Loan Company, has been under indictment for some time.

As the purpose of the crusade was to put these men out of business, the plea for mercy will be heeded, and Attorney General Gray will enter a nolle prosequi in the cases this week.

MURDERER DEFIES WISCONSIN TROOPS

John F. Dietz Buys Provisions and Ammunition, Expecting Siege.

WINTER, Wis., Sept. 11.—News reached here today that Governor Davidson has determined to use State troops to capture John F. Dietz, of Cameron dam.

Carrying magazine rifles of the latest make and with a pair of automatic pistols belted to their waists, Dietz and his eldest son, Clarence, appeared in the village of Winter yesterday and for three hours and a half mingled freely with the people without an attempt being made to arrest them.

Although Winter was the scene of the shooting of Bert Merrell, a timber dealer, by Dietz, in an argument over school affairs Tuesday, and the residents of the vicinity are intensely indignant, no one dared to openly resent his presence.

He calmly loaded his wagon with supplies enough to last him for a month from the village stores, interviewed many of the citizens, defied the authorities and drove home unmolested.

The storekeepers from whom he made his sundry purchases gave him the most courteous treatment and more than once obliged him by discounting their prices. He bought a large amount of provisions and ammunition, making the remark as he bought the latter that it was "liable to come handy."

In his conversation with such of the citizens as would allow his approach, Dietz said that he did not fear Sheriff Madden or a whole regiment of State troops, and that he was waiting for his wife, two grown sons, and two younger children would fight to the death before he would member of his family will be arrested.

BROTHER AND SISTER MEET DEATH IN FIRE
Toledo Children Die While Trying to Get Pets From Burning Barn.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 11.—Brother and sister perished in a fire when the barn of Robert Carnahan's farm, near here, burned at midnight.

Mrs. Carnahan, mother of the children, attempted to save them. She narrowly escaped death, leaving the structure only when her clothing was in flames, and her face deeply blistered.

When the fire was discovered the children entered the barn to save their pets and the flames cut them off before they could escape.

HIGHWAYMEN BEAT AND ROB TWO WOMEN IN JUDICIARY PARK

Early Morning Pedestrians Waylaid by Footpads. One Loses Watch.

ONE OF VICTIMS BRUTALLY MAULED

Hold-up Man Uses Handle of a Heavy Screwdriver as Weapon. Two Arrested.

Incidents of Brutal Hold-Up in Early Morning.

Dallas R. Bowman and companion, Markham E. McQueen, held up by footpads in Judiciary Square, fight, and are beaten.

Bowman's face is badly cut, his teeth protruding through his lips.

Police, hearing cries for help, chase robbers. One fugitive is caught, two suspects arrested, and stolen watch recovered.

Footpads waylaid, brutally assaulted and robbed Dallas R. Bowman, of the Ventosa apartment, and his companion, Markham E. McQueen, of 307 M street northwest, as they passed through Judiciary Square at 3:20 this morning.

The prompt action of Sergeant Curry, of the Sixth precinct, and Police J. O'Dea, who is on the Judiciary Square beat, resulted in catching Henry M. Brooks, twenty-two years old, of Richmond, Va., escaping from the scene of the hold-up, and the apprehension within half an hour of Emile Doust and John H. Cunningham, both of whom say they are eighteen years old, as they entered the Mt. Vernon Hotel.

The three young men are held at the Sixth Precinct Station, each on two charges of assault and two of robbery.

Bowman Badly Beaten.
The police, however, will not take them to court until Tuesday, in order that the extent of the injuries of Bowman, who was seriously hurt, may be ascertained.

Bowman was badly beaten about the head and face with a heavy mechanic's screw-driver, which the police say his assailant used as a bludgeon. So great were the injuries to his face that when a physician was called to find Bowman bleeding from many cuts, and his front teeth protruding through his upper lip. The man's injuries are not so serious, although they are of sufficient gravity to call for a charge of aggravated assault.

According to the police, Bowman and his friend took the short cut past the art store of Bowman, he called for aid, as his assailant went through his clothes and grabbed a valuable hunting case Swiss watch, valued at $150, from his wrist.

Policeman L. J. O'Dea heard the calls for help and responded on the run. He arrived three dark figures were fleeing across the grass. He selected one of the fugitives and gave chase, routing the others in a few squares. The other two escaped.

A few minutes later Sergeant Curry turned in, and was notified of the hold-up. He conferred with Bowman, and recognizing one of the assailants by the description, planted himself at the Mt. Vernon Hotel. The man arrested, when taken to the station house, gave the name of Brooks.

The watch taken from Bowman was not in his possession.

Watch Is Recovered.
Hardly thirty minutes after the hold-up the other men now under arrest made their appearance at the Mt. Vernon Hotel. In the possession of one of them the watch was found.

According to stories told today by the two victims of the hold-up, they first met the three men on E street northwest, near the Police Station. One of the men, they say, was apparently drunk and staggered by them ahead of his two companions. They spoke to him and asked if they could assist him home, but shortly were overtaken by the supposed drunken man's two friends, and the trio went on across Judiciary Square.

Leaped From Bushes.
"We were walking slowly through the park when the three men suddenly lunged out from behind a clump of bushes and attacked us," said Bowman. "Without a word of warning one of the men struck me a terrific blow in the mouth with some blunt weapon. Down I went and he jumped on top of me. In a jiffy he had my watch and was grabbing at my diamond stick pin when I threw him off and got up."

"While I was scuffling with this fellow Mr. McQueen was battling with the other two, one of them having a hammer. He was hitting him hard and striking wildly with it. McQueen knocked one of the fellows down and the man who got my watch then dashed off the scene."

"Both of us called and Policeman O'Dea came up on a run, and sizing up the situation chased one of the men and caught him. McQueen tried to follow the other two, but they dodged into the darkness and escaped."

McQueen declares he is able to identify two of the men. Bowman declares the assault was made on him so quickly that he could not positively identify his assailants.
